Go ahead and run it.

Maybe there's a car coming and maybe there isn't. Fortunately, most people figure the risk isn't worth the chance. But oddly enough, it doesn't work that way with the warning signs of a heart attack. Most people ignore the signals. Or chalk it up to indigestion. Or wait to see what happens next. Every year 350,000 heart attack victims die before they reach the hospital. But you don't have to be one of them. If you feel an uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of your chest that lasts for two minutes or longer, you may be having a heart attack. In some cases, the sensation may spread to the shoulders, neck or arms—and be accompanied by sweating, dizziness, fainting, nausea or shortness of breath. The important thing is to get help. Either by calling the local emergency medical service (EMS) or by asking someone to drive you to a hospital emergency room. If you ignore the signs of a heart attack, you'll have no one to blame. Not even yourself.
