Trainees/Apprentices Wanted Federal Government

Public Works, Canada is recruiting native people for a four year apprenticeship Building Systems Maintenance program.

Applicants must have Grade 12 Math, Physics and Chemistry to qualify. High school transcripts will be verified. Beginning wages approximately $11.00 to $12.00 per hour. Training expected to be in Ottawa.

For more information please call Russell Lazore, home telephone 358-3315, work telephone (613) 342-3324.

About five years ago a recruiter was here and three people were hired under this program. All three are still working in permanent jobs. This is a good training opportunity.

Canada Employment Center for Students

Mr. Bob Kilger announced that a Canada Employment Center for Students (CEC-S) is officially open. The Center is at 224 Pitt Street, Cornwall. The new CEC-S will be supervised by Michelle Flaherty, and four student placement officers will assist students in finding summer employment as well as assist employers in their search for summer help.

The Canada Employment Center for Students is one of more than 400 such offices that will be operating across Canada this summer, staffed by about 1,000 young people.

Ms. Flaherty stated that these offices help students find jobs and assist employers to find workers. Among the services offered by CEC-S are job search skills and resume writing techniques.

Student placement officers will be visiting local employers to discuss their summer employment needs and keep them aware of the availability of student help.

For more information contact: Michelle Flaherty at 932-2655.

the generosity and gentle nature of the native population of the Caribbean that he wrote back to Spain saying these people were "of the body of God" -- or, in Spanish, "corpus in deo." In deo equal Indian. A pretty thin link, but who knows? I know some Indians with God-given bodies.

But a person in my position doesn't have time to defend himself with theoretical history. Since my faux pas, I've been too busy handling the deluge of politically correct terms I am permitted and urged to use.

It must be obvious to most people that in the past few years, native people in Canada have gone through an enormous political metamorphosis, similar to that of people of African descent. Years ago they used to be called niggers, then Negro, then colored, then black and finally, today, I believe the correct term is African-American or African-Canadian.

That's nothing compared to the selection of names and categories available to the original inhabitants of this country. And these names or classifications have nothing to do with any tribal affiliations -- they're just generic terms used to describe us "Indians."

Grab some aspirin and let me give you some examples.

We'll start with the basics: status, non-status, Metis. So far, painless. I guess next would come the already mentioned Indian, followed by native, aboriginal, indigenous and First Nations. Pay attention, there's going to be a test afterward. From there we can go to "on-reserve," "off-reserve," urban, treaty.

Got a headache yet? How about the enfranchised Indians, the Bill C-31 or reinstated people, the traditional Indians, the assimilated Indian? I'm not finished yet.

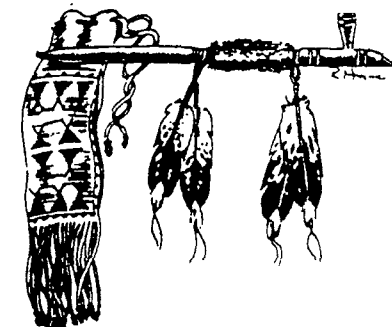

There are the wannabe's (the white variety), the apples (the red variety), the half-breeds, mixed bloods and, of course, the ever-popular full bloods.

My personal favorite are what I call the Descartes Indians: "I think Indian, therefore I am Indian."

Get the picture? Right -- there are a couple of dozen separate names for our people. Where does it all stop? I want to know just who keeps changing all the rules.

Even I get confused sometimes. That's why I usually use the term "Indian." I'm just too busy or too lazy to find out which way the political wind is blowing, or to delve deeply into the cultural/governmental background of whomever I'm talking or writing about. By the time I go through all the categories, I've missed my deadline. Then I become an unemployed Indian.

But I know what you're thinking. Why should I listen to this guy? What the hell does he know? He's probably just some status, off-reserve, urban, native, aboriginal, treaty, half-breed Indian. Well, this week, anyway.
