Sam Houston's Secret.

A correspondent of the New York Sun writes: "In your notice of the life of the late Sam Houston, and in several communications, much is made of the reason why he and his wife parted directly after their marriage. I have always supposed the cause was generally known. Of course, in a matter of that nature you are sure to meet plenty of people who know all about it, and are prepared to explain any and every thing you may wish to know. I never saw Sam Houston, but I have met those who have been his intimate friends. One of these was a former banker in Galveston, well known in New York, and a gentleman held in the highest respect by all who knew him. He was with Davy Crockett, the Bowie brothers (and, by the way, the bowie knife was the invention of Rezin Bowie, and not of his brother Jim), Sidney Johnston and Houston in the struggle for Texan Independence in 1836. This gentleman told me that once in a conversation with Houston the latter revealed the secret which caused so much speculation. He said that on the wedding night his bride told him that, while she respected him, she had not a particle of love for him; she had married him simply to spite the one whom she did love, and with whom she had had a quarrel. 'Very well, madam,' said Houston, donning his big slouch hat, 'good-by,' and so they parted forever. This same version I heard from other and seemingly reputable sources, and to me it sounds reasonable."

The hat worn by Napoleon at the battle of Eylau was sold in Paris in 1835 for a sum equal to $400 in United States currency.

One of the prized relics belonging to the New York Historical Society is the tail of King George III.'s horse. It was taken at Bowling Green.

Children in India have to learn the multiplication table up to 40 times 40, and this is further complicated by the introduction of fractional parts.

Baron Feider, of Vienna, has occupied his time for many years in gathering rare butterflies. Recently he sold his collection to Lord Rothschild for the sum of $5,000.

Some one who has figured on the work done at Pompeii since June, 1872, says that it will take until 1947 to unearth the entire ruins, with 85 men working every day.

During the time of Augustus the Roman army consisted of twenty-five legions—eight on the Rhine, three in Spain, two in Africa, two in Egypt, four in Syria, six on the Danube.

Frederick the Great revolutionized the cavalry of his time. All evolutions were executed at full speed, and the charging and rallying of the Prussian cavalry were deemed miraculous.

The poet Shelley feared being buried alive. In order to guard against it he ordered his heart removed. This queer relic is still preserved at Bascombe Manor, Bournemouth, England.

The Sultan of Turkey is a monomaniac on the subject of carriages. He has been steadily engaged in making a collection of such vehicles for the past twenty years and now has nearly 500 of all makes and kinds.

At an "up to date" wedding in Bowling Green, Mo., recently, the bridal cake was made by the groom, and the happy pair were welcomed after the ceremony at the church by the city brass band with the strain of "See the Conquering Hero Comes."

A Rahway, N. J., widow, who had stowed away $500 in small bills in an old bureau drawer, discovered a few days ago that her hoard had been converted into fraction currency by mice. The moral is that hoarding at home in nooks and corners is a raw way of banking.

PERSONAL.

The love of music amounts almost to a passion with the Countess of Dunraven. When living at Adare she always sings in the village choir.

William T. Nicholson, who acquired fame and fortune through the invention of a machine for cutting files, died at Providence, R. I., recently.

Henri Rochefort expects to be amnestied shortly by the French Chambers. In that event he will desert London and return at once to his home in Paris.
