Fortnightly Club. Fortnightly meeting will be held Feb. 23. Following is the program:

Quotations. Poem, Saal. Discussion, Prof. Mann. Paper, Mrs. Browning as an Inspiration to her Husband, Mrs. Greig.

Book Review, Berdo's "Browning and the Christian Faith," Miss Walling. Questions: On what event in Saal's life is this poem based? Where found in the world? What was the belief in those days regarding disordered minds?

What thought to be a cure? In these days of "old beds for David" why was David sent for to alay this disorder in Saal? Had David and Saal ever before met? Why this particular order of Song selected? How did the ancient harp differ from the modern? What three forces did David employ to restore Saal? How long after this event does David shape these incidents into song? What cause has brought about this disordered condition in Saal? How long had Saal been in this condition? Why do the songs related in latter part of stanza 7 amuse Saal? What additional theme is given in stanzas following 9 into what portion does David rise into prophesy? What is meant in stanza 13 by "The Strongest shall stand the most weak"? What is the general estimate of such a poem? Which in David's estimate was the greater nature, that of Saal or David? Which in yours? Why not call the poem "David"? How does the poet's idea in this song compare with David's in the psalms? Are there any objections to the poem?

Mr. Erwin E. Olmstead, who retired from the firm of Story & Olmstead last week has purchased the Bryson shoe store. Mr. Bryson is contemplating taking charge of a Brooks shoe store in Columbus, O.

Mr. John Woods, whose long experience has made him thoroughly familiar with every department of the shoe business, will remain with Mr. Olmstead.

Thursday evening of the eighteenth about fifty-five friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Pemberton gathered at their home in honor of his forty-eighth birthday. The evening was spent in cards and snook until about twelve o'clock, when the company was served with delicious refreshments, after which Mr. F. A. Casella presented Mr. Pemberton with a beautiful oak rocker. All reported a very pleasant time and begged the pardon of their host for intruding upon his home while he was absent, but with the assurance of forgiveness, they all departed about three a. m. wishing Mr. Pemberton many happy returns of the day.

Mr. F. E. Baldwin was successful in organizing a company for the manufacture of glass milk bottles with automatic machinery, and the company was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000,000. Mr. J. R. Libby of Toledo, O. is president of the new company. A mill will be built this spring at Oondaga, Pa. The Owens Automatic Bottle Machine is owned by the company, and each machine will gather blow and finish nine bottles a minute. The present cost of labor in blowing bottles averages $2.92 a gross, and with this new machine the labor cost is only one cent a gross. Mr. Baldwin will be largely interested in the management of the new company, which gives promise of being a great success.

The final meeting of creditors of Miles F. Chubb, will be heard before Referee J. O. Talloch on March 2nd. The bankrupt's estate is being sold by the court which he claims to have bought with pension money, and that it therefore is exempt from execution. The question of exemption was referred to A. X. Parker of Potsdam, Judge Theodore H. Swift appointed for judgment creditors and Luther B. Wright for the benefit of the bankrupt. It was determined that the property in question was not exempt. As a receiver had been appointed for the judgment creditors, all property not exempt went into his hands. At the coming meeting it will be determined what portion of the property possessed by the bankrupt the receiver is entitled to.

In the case of the New York & Ottawa railroad against Mr. O. H. Turner, of Malone, Judge H. T. Kellogg has handed down a decision in favor of the railroad. The case arose from the fact that Mr. Turner in taking his lumber from his mill at Berlin to the New York Central station drove across the tracks of the N. Y. & O. As several cattle had been killed on the track the railroad put up a fence along the track, and across the road Mr. Turner was using. Mr. Turner had the fence torn down and the railroad then secured a temporary injunction restraining him from using the road. Mr. Turner based his right to travel on the right of way upon a reservation in the deed from his grantor, of the right to cross the lands for lumbering purposes at all reasonable locations. Judge Kellogg finds that the reservation in the deed is not inconsistent with the safe conduct of the railroad; that the reservation under which he claims does not give him the right to do a general logging business on the right of way of the railroad, but only the right to cross, and has granted a permanent injunction against Mr. Turner restraining him from interfering with the fences and cattle guards now or hereafter constructed by the railroad people. Kellogg & Genesee, of Malone, represented the N. Y. & O. and Swift, Fuller & Copley, of Potsdam, Mr. Turner. This case will probably be appealed.
