—The Portland, Oregon, Journal says: "The Christmas present of this year that John McNulty, United States hydrographic expert at Portland, prizes most is his admittance to practice before the United States Court as proctor in admiralty. Court was not in session Tuesday afternoon when Mr. McNulty went before Judge Wolverton with Attorney George S. Shepherd, but Judge Wolverton entertained Mr. Shepherd's motion to admit Mr. McNulty to practice then so that he could have his certificate for Christmas. Mr. McNulty was graduated from the University of Oregon law school last June and has since been admitted to practice in the state courts. Mr. McNulty is now one of only two United States hydrographic experts in the government service who are not only lawyers and have had nautical experience, but technical and practical engineering experience on a man-of-war besides. He put in four years as a petty officer in the navy, and saw much active service at sea."

—The first Friday evening in January the installation of officers of the Royal Neighbor lodge occurred at their hall and was enjoyed by all present. Mrs. H. M. About 35 couples enjoyed dancing until 11:30.

—The Union service held in the First Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening was largely attended. Mr. Whitman spoke on the theme of "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" as applied to the liquor question, while Mr. Bibble spoke on the financial end of the liquor business as applied to states and communities. He gave some figures that were startling, when you think of the amount spent for liquor as compared with that spent for the absolute necessities of life. The arguments of both were clear, forceful and fair.

—The St. Regis Red Vein Granite Co., with offices at 33 Main St., are quietly working away on their plant. A visit to the place revealed that they had installed a 25 horse power electric motor, which will run a 10 horse condenser for operating a 10-man dressing machine; also sanding machine and other machinery for the quick and efficient work in getting out monuments, building and other dressed granite. As soon as electrical connections are made Potsdam will have another industry at work which promises to develop into a good business.

—The splendid span of grey horses belonging to Mr. Alexander McGillivray who lives just beyond the Clarkson place, became frightened on Tuesday morning, while standing in front of the store of Mr. Thos. Woods, Main St., and proceeded to run away. The tongue dropped down, and as the horses had nothing to guide the wagon they were forced into a telegraph pole across the bridge on the island and one jumped over the stone wall in front of the Episcopal Church, while the other remained on the opposite side. The broken tongue during the commotion pierced the hoof of one horse and it required more than an hour to extricate it. This, no doubt, will ruin that animal. Mr. McGillivray was recently offered $500 for the team.

—The barns on the C. and C. Ellis farm between Potsdam and Norwood were completely destroyed by fire early Saturday morning, Jan. 26. When the fire was discovered about one o'clock four buildings were burning simultaneously, which fact tends to confirm the assumption that the fire was of incendiary origin. Nothing was saved with the exception of sleighs and carriages which were near the outside doors of the carriage house and barn. Three cows and two horses were burned. Between forty and fifty tons of hay were consumed, together with the entire autumn crop of grain. During the fire the dwelling house was sootily showered with burning brands, but was saved through the heroic efforts of neighbors and friends. The property was lightly insured and the loss is considerable.

—Through Breen & Breen, Everett J. Markwick of Gouverneur has commenced action against the New York Telephone Co. to recover $25,000 for injuries which he claims that he received through the negligence of the defendant while in its employ, by coming in contact with a live electric light wire. The accident happened in the village of Potsdam in an alley leading from Main to Elm St., Sept. 4, 1912. At that time the plaintiff was directed to go up a tall pole to look for trouble with the wires. Without his knowledge and without any warning on his part, he claims, there had been strung along on the defendant's pole an electric light wire which had passing through it a voltage of from 1100 to 2300. He had been at the top of the pole and performed his duty, and was descending, when the accident occurred. He came in contact with this live wire and for a time was suspended in the air, finally falling to the ground. As a result of the accident he was burned all over by the electricity except one lower limb. He sustained serious injury to the end of the spinal column, bones were crushed and he was badly bruised all over. One limb was left shorter than the other. His charges that he was not furnished a safe place in which to work, that the wire had become exposed, and no longer covered with insulation or any other substance, that proper rules were not in force with reference to working about this wire and that the company was negligent in not warning him of the danger incident to the work.
