COLD BATH KILLS FARMER'S COWS

HERD OF CATTLE FALLS THRO' A HOLE IN THE ICE.

A cold bath in the St. Lawrence river caused the death last week of four cows belonging to Samuel Lawrence in Louisville.

Many wells used for watering the cattle in that vicinity are dry. Farmers cut holes in the ice along the river and cattle get their water there until it thaws sufficiently to allow the water to run into the wells, Mr. Lawrence turned his cattle out one day and then went into the house for dinner. The cows went down to the watering holes as usual, but as Mr. Lawrence had failed to cut the ice that had frozen over the top of the holes, as has to be done, the cows went out to the edge to secure water and nine got into the icy water.

After dinner Mr. Lawrence went to get his cattle and saw them clambering along the edge endeavoring to get out. He got his team and with help drew out eight, the other one having either gone under the ice or sunk to the bottom. One of the animals was drawn out half a mile from where it fell in.

Mr. Lawrence killed two at once, and put the others in the warm stable, doing all he could to make them comfortable but one died during the night. The others are alive and may survive the exposur

ONE ON THE SMUGGLER.

How Indians Are Reported To Have Secured A Little Firewater.

The Malone Telegram says:

"While the smuggling of Canadian whiskey into the United States has become a serious menace, and has engaged the services and efficient efforts of the federal and local authorities in its suppression during the present winter all along the border, there is occasionally a humorous side to be exposed in connection with the illegal traffic in liquor. The story here related is in this class and the joke was decidedly on the whiskey smuggler. While no official confirmation can, of course, be made the story which reached here today runs like this:

"Recently, according to the tale, a heavily loaded motor truck, which had supposedly come across the line, arrived at the Indian reservation, at which point there was trouble with the motor and the truck was obliged to halt for repairs. The mishap occurred near the home of an Indian and the driver of the motor truck requested the privilege of putting the machine and load in the barn while he procured a machinist to repair the motor. The request was granted and the truck was towed into the barn and the door locked.

"The information regarding the presence of the truck, however, had 'leaked' and long before the driver of the truck could return with a repair man, a good sized delegation of Indians arrived at the barn and demanded that the owner unlock the barn. He refused and, as the story goes, was seized, tied in such a way that he could not interfere, while his captors broke the lock on the barn door, entered and in quick time transferred the liquor stored in the truck to their own possession, sampling it liberally before they left the empty truck for the inspection of the driver when he returned.

"The latter's feelings can better be imagined than described when he finally appeared and regalized his loss."

MOTOR SLED WORKS WELL AT WATERTOWN

GETS POWER FROM FOUR CYLINDER MOTOR TO PROPELLOR.

The Watertown Standard says:

Residents along the Sacket Harbor road from the city limits to East Hounsfield were aroused one afternoon last week by a strange contrivance that came tearing down the state highway, having the outline of an automobile, riding upon the runners of a sleigh, and the sound of an eroplane.

No, dear folks, it was not a visitation from the nearby, and mysterious planet of Mars, neither was it one of the vehicles from the Land of the Moon.

It was a dream—one of those dreams that come true. It was a motor sleigh with runners to ride upon, an automobile body to ride in, an automobile engine to furnish the power—and a propeller, geared to that engine, to deliver the "kick" which sent the contraption (as one farmer termed it, whose horses had not been educated up to the latest thing in motor vehicles) skimming along over the downy white. And skim it did—when it hit the smooth going—but when it struck a drift—oh boy—two feet of snow broken only by an auto track which was too wide for the runners of the aersleigh to straddle—then it did a jazz step all its own—with the shimmy, the Egyptian wriggle, and the Rector's Rub all combined. But it went through aero-sleighed past East Hounsfield, two stepped around as nice as you please and then waltzed back to the library in the Half Way House to bid the folks 'howdy'.

The aero-sleigh which has been built at the T. R. Taxi service in Watertown, by Milton "Red" Thompson mechanic, and Thomas Remington, proprietor of the taxi company, has a four cylinder engine mounted behind two bucket seats, a hood and radiator being in front "just like a reglar auto," all mounted upon a pair of sleighs, the engine being geared to a propeller in the rear. The propeller turns about 900 "r. p. ms" and will send the machine over the roads when they are in good condition, at about 50 miles per hour. On the ice of Chaumont Bay, where the makers intend to place it, it is expected to develop a speed of over 70 miles.
