This is Willie waiting for a waffle!

AND he'll wait, and wait and wait . . . The situation, you see, goes something like this. There are lots of others in the family that like waffles, and Willie has to take his turn. Momma has two waffle irons, but every time she uses them a fuse blows—so Willie has to wait and wait . . .

The trouble is Willie's house was built before we had all the wonderful electric appliances we have today. And the wiring just can't stand all the use it's put to. For wiring can stand just so much electricity. When you plug in a refrigerator, an iron, a toaster, a coffee maker, and possibly a washer all into the same circuit, the effect is like a small boy trying to get over a high fence . . . it needs a boost!

After the war you'll be able to get the material and the labor to reinforce your wiring. Until then about all you can do is remember not to plug too many appliances in the same circuit. Above all, check the fuse box yourself. Do not use fuses heavier than 15 amperes. If these blow, take your work into another room and plug in on a different circuit.

For suggestions on how to bring your wiring system up to date, stop in, write or call, your nearest electric company office for your free copy of "Like Sonny—Your Home Wiring May Need New Tailoring."

To enjoy your electric servants—reinforce your wiring tomorrow—protect it today!
