Farm Workers To Get Benefits Of Insurance Plan

Regular farm workers came under the "Old Age and Survivors Insurance" program on Jan. 1, according to County Agricultural Agent, William Pendergast. This is the first time that farm workers have been included under the Social Security Act. It aims to extend the same benefits to regular farm workers as granted to industrial workers.

OASI is a family insurance program operated by the Social Security Administration. Its purpose is to provide some income for old age or in case a worker dies.

A farm worker to be eligible to participate in the OASI program must first work for one calendar quarter to qualify. A man who worked regularly for the same farmer during the calendar quarter October-December, 1950, comes under the program as of Jan. 1, according to agent Pendergast.

This insurance program is financed by OASI contributions. One and a half percent is deducted from the worker's cash wages. The farmer contributes an equal amount, making a total contribution of 3 percent of the cash wage.

The county agent points out that all farmers with regular workers who have been with them since Oct. 1, should deduct 1 1/2 percent from the hired man's cash wages beginning Jan. 1. This is the worker's contribution.

Clarkson Societies See Industrial Films

Two of Clarkson College's professional societies saw movies at their regular biweekly meetings last night.

Members of the student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers saw "Rail Steel in the World of Today" in the physics building.

Three films were featured on the program of the student chapter of the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences. They were "Flying Without Helium," "Aerobatics" and "B26 Aircraft." Yih Chang Yang, instructor in mechanical engineering at Clarkson and advisor for the IAS, discussed the construction of a student project. The IAS met in the chemical engineering building.

There the scores will be compared with totals from other clubs throughout the country.

Chorus to Have Party
The members of the PBC chorus will attend a party on Monday as a reward for their work in singing carols during the Christmas season. William Anderson is underwriting the affair.

The singers will receive soft drinks and other refreshments at the clubhouse.

Francis Bishop, executive director of the club, this week received a letter of thanks for the program the club members presented for veteran patients at Sunmount on Dec. 29.

Ben Gingold, chief of special services, wrote his "sincere thanks for sending some very fine talent" to entertain the patients. He asked that the club members consider a return visit in the future. Agent Warns Farmers Repair Machinery Early

The old advice to fix up farm machinery early is doubly good this year, says St. Lawrence County Agricultural Agent William Pendergast. Farm labor is sure to be scarce during the emergency period, and farmers will have to depend more and more on their machines.

Repair parts and new equipment may be difficult to get, the agent pointed out. Defense needs have already cut into the amount of rubber available for civilian consumption and chances are that metal products will be cut back as well.

In view of possible scarcities, he advised farmers to plan ahead for parts and repairs. They should try to figure what parts they will need during the coming year and order now. This advice applies to new machinery as well as parts.

Now is a good time to have repairs made, too. As spring work gets nearer, repair shops may have more work than they can handle. The armed services and defense industry will probably cut into the numbers of skilled repair men as well, the agent points out.

"We don't advise scare buying," the agent states "in a period of emergency, the farmer must produce more than ever with less help. It is logical that he keep his production tools in the best possible shape."
