Heroism Evident In Gardner Fire

Heroism came to light recently in the early morning fire of Jan. 27 which gutted the Gardner home at the corner of Francis and Larnart Streets.

A neighbor of the Gardner family informed the Courier this week that another neighbor of the Gardners, Stanley Powell, saw the smoke and notified the fire department of the blaze.

He then spotted Douglas Gardner plunging headlong out of a second story window to escape the flames. Powell dashed across the street, picked up Gardner and carried him on his back away from the fire. He took him to his own home and treated him until taken to the Potsdam Hospital.

Mike Jerome, who also lives in the same area, fought his way through dense smoke inside the house to carry Mrs. Anna Gardner out of the burning building to safety.

Jerome probably saved Mrs. Gardner's life. Douglas Gardner could have been injured much more than he had if not for the quick action of his neighbor. Hat's off to these two brave and courageous men.
