Group To Visit Dauphin Cottage

By Mary H. Biondi, County Historian

Whether he was the Lost Dauphin of France or half-bred Indian, there is no more colorful chapter in North Country history than the legend that the heir to the throne of France was hidden away in Northern New York.

Until 1851 no one questioned that the Rev. Eleazar Williams was anything but what he appeared to be, the son of one Thomas Williams, an Oneida Indian, and the grandson of Eunice Williams, daughter of a Deerfield, Mass., clergyman, who was stolen by the Indians at the time of the infamous Deerfield Massacre.

In 1851 during a chance meeting on the new train from here to New York the Rev. John H. Hanson, an Episcopal rector, was told by Williams that his mind was blank until he was 14 years old but that he had certain vague memories of seeing troops drilling in a garden and resting on a carpet with his head against the silken dress of a lady.

There was much evidence that Eleazar might have not been born with Indian blood. Known in the tribe as "Lazare" he had none of their features, but strongly resembled members of the House of Hapsburg. He foresook his education which had been paid for by "mysterious" funds at Deerfield, and in 1812 operated among the St. Regis Indians keeping them loyal to the United States. He was wounded in the Battle of Plattsburgh. When he died in 1858 he was buried in the little Episcopal cemetery in Hogsburg.

As late as 1946 descendants of the French royalty visited the site there. The Duke and Duchess DeMieur were making a study of legends concerning the lost son of King Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

They visited the steep-gabled Queen Anne style frame building which was once the home of the missionary Eleazar Williams and the site of his church near Hogsburg. They spent hours talking with villagers and at the Murphy Hotel about the story.
