Nancy Jackson describes Paintings at Hepburn

By Evelyn Riehl, CO 7-7450

THE COLTONS — Sometimes the world just sits on our doorstep, waiting to come in. This afternoon, Colton's Hepburn Library will let a part of the Art world right in the front door and into our lives in the person of Mrs. Nancy Jackson, who will be the Library's guest at a "Meet the Artist" tea from two to four.

Mrs. Jackson, an accomplished artist, with a worldwide scope of experience, due to her family life as wife of a Lt. Colonel in the U.S. Air Force, works primarily in a little known medium—beeswax mixed with pigments—called Encaustics, meaning "burned on."

One of the most ancient materials for painting, and the most durable, beeswax has a depth and life to its colors that makes it almost impossible for the viewer not to enjoy feeling it, as well as seeing it. (I simply couldn't keep my fingers from the work of Mrs. Jackson that has been on display at the library for two weeks).

A World War II friend of Hepburn Library's Kate Klein, Mrs. Jackson served in the Women's Army Corps from Overseas Training to Mediterranean Service with Kate, and has exchanged Christmas letters with the Kleins through the 20 years since they last saw each other. Now stationed with her husband in Dover, Del., Mrs. Jackson has very successfully combined raising four children with her art career, which has now settled down to almost exclusive work in Encaustics, although she has worked also in oils and water colors.

I must share what Kate calls the "Pun of WW II." It seems that their contingent of WACS was billeted in the Wax Museum in Algiers, North Africa, at which time all of Kate and Nancy's free time was spent in "doing" the Art of the area. A transfer to Italy for the pair opened more horizons, so that they divided their time between museums and opera houses. Mrs. Jackson explains that she melts the bee's wax in orange juice cans, mixes it with various pigments in muffin tins, maintaining the correct temperature on her kitchen stove, while applying the colors to prepared Masonite with a heated spatula. (certainly sounds "homey" for such an ancient form of art!) A final buffing with a soft cloth completes the work.

As to the impulse of the observer to touch the paintings, Mrs. Jackson says it is actually good for them, since their life is the longest of any painting material, and that all they need to restore the unusual vibrancy of their color is an occasional buffing.

As you can guess from my long-windedness, I'm really impressed with Mrs. Jackson's work, a pair of soaring gulls and three "still lifes" that are already at the library.

More of her work will be on display today at the library, since the Jackson family will be the house guests of the Kleins for the weekend.

Hope you will take this opportunity to visit our library, meet Mrs. Jackson, and enjoy a little known part of the Art world . . . that's from two to four o'clock.

New Milk Bill hailed by Co-op

Passage of the milk standardization bill by the New York Legislature was hailed here by a dairy leader as a move of great benefit to New York State dairy farmers.

The bill allows the addition or withdrawal of fat in milk so that a standardized product may be offered tailored to consumer demands.

Robert C. Forsythe, Service Division Manager of the Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, hailed the passage of the measure as of "great benefit to the state's dairy industry." He said "this puts New York State producers in a much better competitive position with farmers in other states."

He lauded the efforts of Legislator George M. Michaels of Auburn, noting that "Michaels' tireless efforts and the support of other legislators helped make this possible."

He said the new law will tend to create more accurate pricing and enable farmers to provide the consumer with products tailor-made to their tastes."

The measure was given final approval June 28, 111 to 3, in the New York Legislature.

Northeast Federation spear headed efforts to gain passage of the standardization measure. Nearly all segments of the dairy industry also supported it.

Forsythe added that dairy farmers also appreciated the work of Herbert Kling, in the Division of Milk Control, New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.
