Masons To Meet In Canton

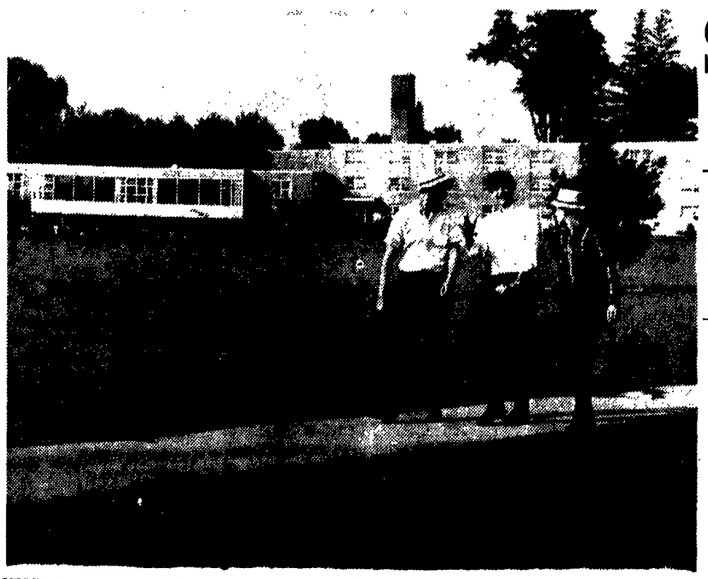
Canton — Four or five hundred Masons from seven North Country area districts will attend a dinner in Canton Masonic Temple Saturday night, Sept. 23, at 6:30 to hear an address by Frank G. Staples, grand master.

During the program, mention will be made of the 160th anniversary of the granting of the first charter in St. Lawrence County by the Grand Lodge of the' State of New York.

The original charter, now in the possession of St. Lawrence Lodge 111, Canton, will be displayed; also the minute book for those years from 1807-1823, owned by Gouverneur Lodge 217, and the jewels owned by Hermon Lodge 500, will be shown.

Many members of the Grand Lodge line will accompany Grand Master Staples to Canton.

The districts and the district deputies included in the area meeting will be Second St. Lawrence, Roy H. Squires; First St. Lawrence, GeGorge Hall; Franklin-Hamilton, Clayton A. Winters; Jefferson-Lewis, Ernest A. iRce; Clinton, Lewis A. Perry; Jefferson, Richard F. Haller; Essex, Albert C. eDnton; Oswego, Alfred L. LaVaute.



GOING TO TOWN — Three freshmen at Clarkson College are on their way "into town" from the Clarkson Hill Campus across the river on Maple St. More than 5,100 students arrived in Potsdam last week to begin classes at the two colleges.

Colton Firm Awarded Contract for Wanakena Project

Wanakena — A contract has been awarded to build a two-story, concrete-block vehicle and maintenance building at the New York Ranger School at Wanakena, according to Jean E. Fisher, director.

The State University Construction Fund awarded the $57,000 contract to Fisher-Rexford, Inc., of Colton.

The Ranger School is a division of the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

Subcontractors include Northern Mechanical, Inc., of Norwood and Harron's Electric Service, Gouverneur.

The building was designed by the Syracuse architectural firm of Quinliven, Pierik & Krause. The building is scheduled for completion this winter.

Survey Says CCT Grads Averaging $8,338 Salary

Ramsdell added that 1967 graduates with master's degrees and the doctor of philosophy degree also received substantial wage increases compared with Clarkson graduates with higher degrees in 1966. The average holder of the master of science degree started at $9,784 in June. compared with $9,227 the previous year, while those holding the doctorate began at $14,160 this year—$2,440 higher than the average beginning salary in 1966 for those with the same degree.

A survey of the employment status of students who left Clarkson College of Technology in June with bachelor's degrees reveals that the average graduate received a starting annual salary of $8,338—$718 more than the previous year's average graduate.

According to a report issued recently by F.A. Ramsdell, Clarkson's director of placement, 1967 graduates with bachelor's degrees were hired for from $354 to $1,100 more than their 1966 counterparts. Ramsdell compiled his report from questionnaires received from 311 of 330 June graduates.

The college placement director noted that 26.7 percent of the class of 1967 has gone on to graduate school and that another 6.4 percent has entered the military service. The number of graduates in the average salary survey totaled 202 (61.2 percent), leaving 5.7 percent of the class unaccounted for.

The greatest increase for graduates of any one major field of study was in physics where the average starting pay jumped from $8,415 to $9,529 in a year's time. Clarkson graduates in industrial management were hired in June for an average $8,201—a $941 increase over the previous year's beginning wage. Engineering graduates—chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineers—started at an overall average of $8,444. an increase of $569 per man. Of the four areas of study, mechanical engineers commanded the greatest average increase, $680 per graduate over the 1966 rate.

The class of 1967 high salary for an individual with a bachelor's degree was awarded to an industrial distribution graduate whose starting pay was $9,700. His fellow graduates of the program in June are earning $8,300 on the average.
