

Dr. Walsh Appointed Director of Institutional Research

Dr. Garnar V. Walsh, a career educator with a broad background in administration and research, has been appointed director of institutional research at the State University College at Potsdam.

Dr. Walsh will be responsible for research in various aspects of the college's operation, to document Potsdam's current role in education and assist in determining future directions of the college's academic programs.

A native of Malone, Dr. Walsh is a graduate of St. Lawrence University. He earned his advanced degrees from the State University of New York at Albany and the University of Florida. He received his doctorate in educational administration from Florida, and has also studied at Tufts University, Clarkson College of Technology and Adelphi College.

Prior to coming to Potsdam, Dr. Walsh was a member of the faculty at the State University at Albany, where he served as associate director of the university's project on improving college teaching. Before going to Albany, he was associated with the New York State Education Department, where he specialized in development of in-service leadership training for administrators.

Dr. Walsh has written for professional journals, including an article about leadership training for school administrators which appeared earlier this year in the National School Board Journal.

While completing requirements for his doctorate degree at the University of Florida, Dr. Walsh was responsible for researching background material relating to 15 community colleges seeking accreditation in the State of Florida. He has also conducted extensive research in factors determining power structures formed in United States communities.

A Navy veteran with two and one-half years submarine service, Dr. Walsh is a member of several professional organizations and has a broad background in community service.

He is married to the former Fortana Pelkey of Burke. The couple have five children.

Other top appointments announced by Dr. Alfred W. Thatcher, acting president of the college, including Dr. Charles T. Weaver, a recognized authority on educational development in the Congo, as director of International Education; Dr. Arthur W. J. Ullman as professor and chairman of the department of mathematics, and Dr. Mereld D. Keys as associate professor and acting chairman of the department of philosophy.

A graduate of Mercer University, Macon, Ga., Dr. Weaver earned the master's degree in school administration at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga. and received the doctorate degree in comparative education from George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. He has also studied at State University, and at Ecole Coloniale, Brussels, Belgium.

During the period 1951-67, Dr. Weaver spent 10 years in the Congo, where he was actively involved in the preparation of teachers for that nation's developing system of education.

He has directed Congo schools at both the elementary and secondary level, and has served on the faculties of Congo universities devoted to preparing future teachers needed to expand school systems throughout the nation. Prior to coming to Potsdam, he taught education at the University Libre du Congo, and taught education and African culture at Ecole Normale Moyenne, both in Lulabourg.

While studying for his doctorate at George Peabody College, Dr. Weaver served on the education faculty there, and was assistant to the director of the college's International Center. He has also taught in elementary and secondary schools in Georgia.

A member of several professional societies, Dr. Weaver has written numerous articles for publication, including documents on tribal relationships, development of Congo education and understanding foreign students.

Dr. Ullman comes to Potsdam from the faculty at Texas A and M University, where he taught mathematics and logic. He has also served on the faculties at Texas Christian University, Rice University and Stanford University, and has written mathematical papers published in several professional journals.

A member of numerous professional societies, Dr. Ullman is a graduate of Miami University, and earned his master's and doctorate degrees in mathematics at Rice University. He has also studied at the University of Florida and Stanford University.

Dr. Keys was a member of the philosophy faculty at Idaho State University prior to coming to Potsdam, and previously taught at La Verne

Civil Engineering Department to Be Expanded Courier - Freeman

Thanks to a $6,000 gift — $5,000 from the Associated General Contractors of America (AGCA) and the balance from an affiliated group, the Associates of the American General Contractors — Clarkson College of Technology has the means to expand its educational activity in the field of construction engineering.

The financial support, initiated in part as a memorial to a former first vice-president of the New York Chapter of the AGCA, will be used by Clarkson's department of civil engineering to develop new courses in construction engineering. The department intends eventually to offer a major in that area to students interested in careers in construction.

According to Robert L. Lewis, chairman of Clarkson's civil engineering department, half of the total amount of the grant will support course development by a member of the department staff. The remainder will be used to expand library resources; to purchase teaching aids, and to provide for travel to meetings and to institutions which currently offer courses in the field.

How the funds would be used was determined by a study by three members of the college's civil engineering faculty. Their proposal was immediately acceptable to the donors.

Lewis said that Edmond J. Glavin, an assistant professor of civil engineering at Clarkson, will devote approximately 30 percent of his time this year toward new course development. In each of the past two years, Glavin has organized and conducted a short seminar in January on Modern Methods in Construction Planning and Scheduling for management personnel of the construction industry.

The AGCA gift is a memorial to Gust A. Peterson, vice-president of the Association and vice-president and New York State Manager of company operations for S. J. Groves & Sons, Inc., North Syracuse. He was one of five of that company's employees who died in a small plane crash last May near Binghamton.

Appointed Research Assistant

Dr. Donald Stillman, chairman of the Humanities Department at Clarkson College, has been appointed a research assistant for a Humanistic-Social Project sponsored by the American Society for Engineering Education.

Member of Parliament To Speak at Clarkson

The project, a nation-wide study under the direction of Dr. Sterling Olmsted of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, is supported by a grant from the Carnegie Foundation. Stillman is one of less than 20 professors chosen to examine the place of humanities and social sciences in engineering education. The Clarkson professor is in Rensselaerville today to attend a three-day preliminary workshop at that community's Institute on Man and Science. The purpose of the workshop is to define the objectives of the project and to establish procedures for teams of field workers who will visit selected colleges and universities in coming months.

Stillman said that the final report of the project is due next fall. He pointed out that the overall objective of the study is to stimulate a continuing search for better ways of helping engineering students benefit from the values resident in the humanities and social sciences.

Norman St. John-Stevens, Member of the British Parliament, author, barrister and journalist, will speak in convocation at Clarkson College of Technology on Thursday, Oct. 12.

The convocation, first of academic year at Clarkson, will take place at 2:15 p.m. in Snell Hall Auditorium. It will be open to the public.

St. John-Stevens' Thursday convocation topic will be "Art, Morality and Censorship." He will discuss "Law and Morals," "Religious Freedom: A Reconciliation of Faith and Liberty," and "How the British Parliament Works" during informal seminars and classroom sessions scheduled throughout the day on Friday.

Born in 1929 in London, St. John-Stevens was educated at Ratcliffe College, at Fitzwilliam College, Cambridge, from which he graduated in 1950 with first class honors in law. He also received his master's degree from Ratcliffe.

In 1957 he was awarded the doctor of laws degree from London University. That same year he won the Yorke Prize at Cambridge and became a fellow of the Yale School under a Fulbright Award. In 1958 he received the degree of doctor of juridical science from Yale.

He has lectured at Kings College, London, and has tutored in jurisprudence at Christ Church and Merton Colleges, Oxford. He was a founder-member of the Institute of Higher European Studies at Bolzano in 1957.

R. B. Thomas Plans Speech

Ronald B. Thomas, a principal investigator for the Manhattanville Music Curriculum Project, will discuss the project during a public lecture today at the State University College at Potsdam.

The program will start at 7:30 p.m. in Crane Recital Hall.

Agrees to Serve On Committees

Dr. Deborah Kaplan has agreed to serve on the State of New York Advisory Committee on Child Care Needs and its Subcommittee on Unmarried Parenthood.

In her position, she and other members of the committee will advise Joint Legislative Committee of the State Legislature on child care needs.

The Manhattanville Music Curriculum Project is a four-year program with the objective of developing a meaningful sequence of basic musical concepts for children, using "discovery" approaches to develop a curriculum which would expand the teacher's confidence, ideas and flexibility in the classroom, and result in increased musical creativity.

The lecture is sponsored by the Potsdam chapter of the Music Educators National Conference.

Rev. Hanna To Deliver 2 Lectures

The Rev. Charles B. Hanna, former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Potsdam, will deliver two lectures next week at the State University College at Potsdam.

The Tuesday and Wednesday night programs sponsored by the faculty convocation committee at the college, will start at 7:30 p.m. in the College Union. The public is invited.

"God and the Unconscious," will be the subject of Mr. Hanna's Tuesday lecture. Wednesday, he will discuss, "The Present Crisis in Psychological and Religious." Both lectures will be followed by a period for informal discussion and a coffee hour.

The subjects to be discussed concern areas of thought from Mr. Hanna's book, "Face of the Deep," published last spring as an answer in part to the controversial, "God Is Dead," ideology.

A graduate of the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio, and the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, Mr. Hanna recently returned from 11 years in Europe, where he served as minister of the International Protestant Church of Zurich, Switzerland and as pastor of American Church, Athens, Greece.
