More than 40 per cent of visual impairment due to injuries occur in the home, warns the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Among the causes are caustic alkalis and acids such as those contained in Household cleaning products, which can result in chemical burns to the eye—in the case of aerosols, compounded by the force of contact. If contact occurs, flood the eye immediately with water, continuing for at least 15 minutes. Then see a doctor right away.
