Executive Visits Clarkson

Ellsworth F. Vines, vice president of operations of SI Industries Inc., a company specializing in heavy industrial maintenance operations and construction services, was a recent Executive in Residence at Clarkson University's School of Management (SOM).

His three-day visit included meetings with SOM students, faculty and Clarkson staff members. In several classes he discussed his perspective on, and experience in, the field of operations/production management. "More and more, the world is revolving around two things: risk and profitability," he said.

A 1965 graduate of Clarkson where he earned his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering and master's in industrial management, Vines joined the Dravo Corporation in Pittsburgh, Pa. in 1966.

He began this 18-year association with Dravo as a senior field engineer in Midland, Pa., and took on increasing managerial positions throughout the United States and the world until 1981 he had become the company's director of projects for Mexico operations.

Three years later he joined SI Industries, a member of the Schneider Group of Companies. As vice president of operations he is responsible for developing and executing construction activities throughout the United States.

The co-author of two books "Integrated Simulation" and "A Guide to Construction Contracting and Management," Vines is also a member of the Pennsylvania Society of Professional Engineers, Project Management Institute and the International Project Management Institute.

Clarkson's Executive in Residence Program attracts outstanding corporate leaders from across the nation to the university campus. Previous visitors have included Donald Procknow, the president at AT&T Technologies; Donald Clark, president of Household International; and Alan Lafey, recently retired executive vice president of Human Resources of Chase Manhattan Bank.
